EDGAR ORVILLE BAILEY, son of Levi M. Bailey, Sr. {J780} and Mary Agnes (Lloyd) Bailey, was born Jan. 9, 1883 at Brome County, Quebec (QC), Canada. Edgar lost his mother when he was six, and his grandmother Sophronia Bailey stepped in as acting mother. When his father also died when he ten, he was placed to live with relatives, including his aunt Susan (Lloyd) Wellington of Rindge, NH. By the time he was 18, he was recorded on the 1901 census of Potton, QC as a "domestic" in the home of a neighbor (and Peabody family cousin) called McNeal Manson.

Edgar was married Oct. 11, 1905 at North Troy, VT to MAUD MAY CARTER, illegitimate daughter of Melvina (Bowen) Carter (1867-1941). Maud was born Oct. 4, 1884 at Potton Township, Brome County, QC. She was born 4 ½ months after her mother had married James Carter (1864-1928). While James Carter was traditionally thought to be Maud's natural father, and was the only father she ever knew, DNA evidence has proven that her natural father was Chauncey Ezra Magoon (1856-1918). Edgar and Maud had five sons, all born at Potton township, Brome County, QC, the older two in Mansonville village and the three youngest in the hamlet of Highwater:

- i. Wilson Edgar Bailey, b. Mar. 27, 1909. Wilson attended school at Mansonville village, after which (1927) he attended the Bugbee Business College at Stanstead, Quebec, completing a business course. Wilson never married. As a young man, Wilson worked, on a temporary basis, for the Canadian Pacific Railway on the maintenance crew. Later he was employed, as a baggage man on passenger trains. He also drove truck for the Carnation Milk Company, picking up milk from farmers and delivering it to the plant at Sherbrooke QC. Eventually he returned to the farm, and apart from helping his father to manage the farm, he started his own Mink Ranch. Wilson, like his younger brother Merton, was a D-Day Veteran, with his service commemorated at Juno Beach, Normandy. Wilson had enlisted on Aug. 13, 1940, closing down his mink ranch in Potton in order to "protect my younger brother Merton". Merton had enlisted about a month earlier. They both joined the 66th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery at Place Viger, in Montreal, which eventually became the 14th Canadian Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery. Wilson and his brother crossed the channel on the same D-Day landing craft. Wilson was the Troop Commander's Tank Driver on D-Day. Once the War was over in 1945, Wilson returned home to the family farm. He also drove a School Bus for a time (until 1960) to supplement his income. On Mar. 6, 1960, he officially acquired the home farm from his father. But due to a heart attack later in 1960, he decided to sell the farm and in 1962 it left the Bailey family after about 125 years. Wilson Bailey died Jan. 26, 1997 in Brome-Missisquoi Perkins Hospital at Cowansville, Quebec, age 87. He was buried in Mansonville Protestant Cemetery at Mansonville, QC.
- ii. Cecil Carter Bailey, b. Jun. 17, 1912. He died Jul. 8, 1912, age 21 days. He was buried in Mansonville Protestant Cemetery at Mansonville, QC.
- J1241 iii. Linwood Levi Bailey, b. Jun. 6, 1915. He first married Agnes (Broo) Hammond and secondly Phyllis Mary (Bidwell) Darrah.
- J1242 iv. Merton Earl Bailey (twin), b. May 4, 1922. He married Mary Frances Cowan.
- J1243 v. Berton Merrill Bailey (twin), b. May 4, 1922. He first married Shirley Evelyn Aiken and secondly Ruth Merab (Heath) Fullerton.

Upon marriage, Edgar and Maud settled at Mansonville, QC in the village, where they operated a bakery. They were living there with their oldest son when the 1911 census was taken. In late 1912, they purchased a house and moved (about 4 miles south) to Highwater, QC (the place in South Potton which had been called Mansonville Station until just prior to that time). This coincided with Edgar joining the staff of the Canadian Customs, located at the Highwater train station. The family lived there (their three youngest children were born in their Highwater house) until about 1932. The 1921 census lists Edgar and his wife living at Highwater, with their two youngest children

(the twins) arriving the following year. "Ed" was one of the first Highwater residents to purchase an "auto" in 1915.

While at Highwater, Ed was appointed "Sub-Collector" of Customs and Excise for the period 1923-1930. Due to ill health, he retired from the civil service in 1932. As his health improved, he became active as a carpenter, pursuing this trade for about 25 years. In 1932, the family moved back to the Bailey family farm north of Mansonville. After Ed's father died, the farm had been inherited by his aunt Jane Bailey, and actually left the family for a period from 1924, but Ed was able to reacquire the homestead.

Maud Bailey died Jul. 8, 1953 in Orleans County Hospital at Newport, VT, age 68. Widower Ed Bailey died Mar. 29, 1965 in Brome-Missisquoi Perkins Hospital at Cowansville, Missisquoi County, Quebec, Canada, age 82. Ed and Maud Bailey were buried in Mansonville Protestant Cemetery at Mansonville, QC.
